Biographical Note

Charlotte Jane “Lottie” Allan was a Christian Scientist based in Toronto, Canada. Born in Thorold, Ontario, to the south, she married Robert J. S. (John Sharp) Allan in 1888.

Allan took Christian Science Primary class instruction with Pamela J. Leonard, C.S.D. She and her husband became members of The First Church of Christ, Scientist (The Mother Church) on December 29, 1894. She was a member of First Church of Christ, Scientist, Toronto, where she served as Second Reader (Mary Baker Eddy, diary, n.d., EF060).

Allan worked at Pleasant View, Mary Baker Eddy's home in Concord, New Hampshire, from April to October 1902, and again from January to April 1903, serving with other Christian Scientists, including Pamela J. Leonard. This service was cut short when Allan's husband died unexpectedly and she returned to Toronto to settle his affairs.

Scope and Content Note

Lottie Allan Correspondence consists of handwritten drafts and copies of letters between Allan and Mary Baker Eddy, Calvin A. Frye, and Beth Harmony. These reflect Allan's gratitude to Eddy, her questions on Christian Science practice, her reasons for leaving Pleasant View, and confirmations of her service there in 1902 and 1903.

Two letters in particular, from February 14 and 20, 1901, discuss Allan's query to Frye and Eddy about Christian Science Reading Rooms and whether they should be located separately from churches. The initial query is in the letter dated February 14, 1901. Eddy responded, “Have your reading room separate from your church” (Mary Baker Eddy to Lottie Allan, 1901 February 16, L09080). Allan responded on February 20, 1901, with gratitude, stating, “In an hour of great need came the priceless message, giving direction that the reading room shall be separate from the church.”

The item numbers for the sent version of the letters found in the Mary Baker Eddy Incoming Correspondence are referenced when available. All drafts and copies of the letters were retained by Allen.
